Where in the World is the Jamestown Press?

Islanders Heidi Keller Moon, left, and Madeline Coviello were introduced to one another for the first time when a fellow passenger aboard the M/S Nordnorge realized that they were both from Jamestown. Now that they have made the voyage through the Chilean Fjords and Antarctica, both women have visited all seven continents.

Library offers new magazine index database

The public libraries in Rhode Island purchased a database for library-card holders in the state. At the Jamestown library, patrons can access this world of information by going to the library's homepage at www.jamestownri.com/library and clicking on the words "Magazine Index" in the column headed "Catalogs and Databases."

Anyone who has difficulty finding the information they need can come into the library or call 423-7280 for assistance.

The new database includes:
Alt HealthWatch: Full texts for 180 publications dating back to 1990.

MURPHY'S LAW

A critical balance for prosecutors: limiting grand jury indictments to those cases that one can reasonably expect to win versus allowing the justice system to "be seen to work" by charging those whose conduct is viewed by the public as criminal.

Grand juries provide a critically important investigative and screening process in the criminal justice system. That is one reason why strict enforcement of perjury laws is an absolute necessity when testimony before a grand jury has been deceptive.

Most credit card issuers are reaping record profits. The interest rates charged are, in many instances, obscenely high. A person earning average wages must pay the balance in full every month, or risk incurring absolutely crushing debt.

Having lobbied Congress to deny effective bankruptcy relief to debtors ensnared by easy credit, credit card issuers have created a situation in which debt carelessly incurred may never be escaped.
