maintain two 10-foot-wide public access trails along North Road and Weeden Lane.

Town Council President David Long who will not be seeking reelection in November described the evening as "amazing" and "touching."

"This is my ninth and final Financial Town Meeting," Long said, "And I must say that this is the best one yet. This is a win-win event for everybody."

Tuesday's FTM stands in stark contrast to the town's recent annual meeting in which just over 70 residents attended.

At one point, town officials were seen checking the capacity limit for the room, however thankfully the roughly 400 voters and non-voters in attendance fell well below the allowed 700.

Conanicut Island Land Trust President Quentin Anthony, who briefly stood to address the crowd before quickly and quietly sitting back down, remarked that he couldn't recall a larger turnout. "I don't think there's been a turnout like this in my lifetime, or ever before," Anthony said. After surveying the audience, Anthony said he knew the vote would be positive and his words were not needed.

Soon after Anthony's aborted address, Council Vice President Julio DiGiando made the motion to approve the expenditure. After being seconded by a throng of eager residents, the gymnasium erupted in a drawn-out "aye." Following a reassuring moment of silence as the nays were called, the motion passed and the auditorium burst in cheers and applause.

DiGiando said that while he expected the result to have turned out as it did, he was surprised by the turnout.

Town Administrator Bruce Keiser agreed. "I'm absolutely overwhelmed that this many people would attend a Financial Town Meeting," Keiser said. However, like DiGiando, Keiser was not surprised with the result. "People don't want to see what's most cherished to them go by the wayside," Keiser said.

Anthony agreed. "This community has always supported the protection of open space," Anthony said. "This was a continuation of that tradition."
