

Help fill needs at food pantry

Victims of domestic violence, served by the Women's Resource Center of Newport and Bristol Counties, are in need of items to stock the food pantry.

Requests for Food Pantry assistance have been high in recent months and help is needed from community members in Newport, Middletown, Portsmouth, Tiverton, Little Compton, Jamestown, Bristol, Warren and Barrington.

Dry or canned goods, and especially baby care items, like diapers, and personal hygiene and feminine care items are much needed. If anyone would rather help by making a contribution to the Women's Resource Center, cash donations can be used to purchase gift cards at local supermarkets to help an individual or family. Please bring donations to the Women's Resource Center's Newport location at 114 Touro Street, or the Warren location at 624 Main St.

The Women's Resource Center of Newport and Bristol Counties is one of the six member agencies of the Rhode Island Coalition Against Domestic Violence. We provide comprehensive services to women, children and families affected by the emotional, financial, and legal impacts of domestic violence. The Women's Resource Center provides an emergency shelter/safe house, a 24-hour hotline, legal services and court advocacy, counseling, children's programs, prevention education and other services at two locations. For help with domestic violence issues around the clock, call the hotline at 847-2533. For more information on supporting the work of the Women's Resource Center, contact Wanda Jean Lord, director of development, at 846-5263, ext. 116.

Friendly Visitors need some help

Child & Family Services has many volunteer opportunities for people who would like to lend a hand to someone who could use some extra support. Call the volunteer office at 848-4210 for more information.

The Friendly Visitor program matches volunteers with the homebound elderly. Currently there are two elders waiting. Volunteers might chat, read, or take their elder for a ride. However, the most important consideration is to be a good listener. Hours are flexible. A one-year commitment is preferred.

There is also an opportunity for a man and woman who relate well to children. The agency has an eleven-year-old boy and girl who could benefit from a mentor. The boy likes all sports and age typical activities. The girl likes arts and crafts and all kinds of music. They both live in Newport. This would be a year commitment and could be arranged to accommodate the volunteer's schedule. Background screening is required.

The Agency's Youth Opportunity Center would like a volunteer to design and lead an etiquette class for teens who are preparing to enter the job market. They need direction developing basic manners which will help them when making job contacts and participating in interviews. This could probably be done in two sessions around 3 p.m. weekdays at the Florence Gray Center in Newport Heights.

Sen. Reed banquet set

Save The Bay, a non-profit, member-volunteer organization that for 37 years has guarded the health and future of Narragansett Bay and its watershed, will hold an event celebrating U.S. Senator Jack Reed's support of Save The Bay's efforts to work for the bay people want.

Save The Bay Honors U.S. Senator Jack Reed will take place Saturday, Nov. 3, at the Rhode Island Convention Center.

"Senator Reed is a friend of Save The Bay, an advocate for all who treasure Narragansett Bay and now, with the recent introduction of his 'No Child Left Inside Act,' a champion of environmental education throughout the country," Save The Bay Executive Director Curt Spalding said.

"We hope the bay community will unite in this show of appreciation for Senator Reed's ongoing support of our mission to protect, restore and explore the bay, and to connect people with this marvelous resource," Spalding added. "Senator Reed believes, as we do, that education is a key to protecting the bay's future. Much of what we do would not be possible without the senator's leadership."

Tickets for the event are $300 per person; $500 per couple. Reservations may be made online at www.savebay.org. Patrons may further support the event by way of sponsorship and advertising opportunities in the commemorative journal, which every guest will receive.
