How to wrap the perfect gift with newsprint

We've all had it happen one time or another. We have a stack of gifts to wrap, and by the time we get to the last one, we're nearly out of paper. We have to scrimp and pinch to cover the bulk of the gift and use scraps to fill in any remaining holes. The gift gets wrapped, but it's not pretty. The next time this happens to you, don't despair. Grab The Jamestown Press and use it and the remaining wrapping paper to create a beautifully wrapped gift. Here's how.

- one Wrap the gift in newspaper
- two Cut a fairly wide strip from the remaining wrapping paper long enough to go around the center of the gift.
- three Fold the edges of the strip under, wrap it around the gift and tape the ends on the back.
- four Cut one large square of newspaper and one large square of wrapping paper and tape them loosely together
- five Cut a diagonal line, three-fourths of the way up, on each corner of the square to create four triangular-shaped areas.
- six Fold the left-hand corner of each triangular-shaped area to the center of the square and tape loosely to create a pinwheel bow.
- seven Attach the bow to the center of the gift, fluff the ends, and voila, your gift is complete.
