for a hike around the camp and when they returned built a large campfire, which they kept lit all weekend. The new Scouts had a brook behind the area where we were camping and spent the rest of the time building small rafts and boats out of small twigs and racing them on the water."

In light of a recent action by the state stopping an islander from cutting vegetation on his property, Agnes Filkins sent along a clipping from the Weekly Telegraph in Sydney, Australia.

It seems culprits there have been drilling holes in the base of trees at night and injecting herbicides or other poisons that kill the trees and improves the sea view as well as adding tens of thousands of pounds to a home's value.

Guess they don't have a CRMC down under!

Keep your pet's nails trimmed says Dr. Joshua Hatch of the Jamestown Animal Clinic in his Pet Tip of the Week.

"Can you hear the click of toenails whenever your dog steps on the tiles or wood floors? Does Fluffy get stuck on the carpeting or is kitty shredding your drapes? Sounds like it is time to get your pet's nails trimmed or learn how to do it yourself. Since many pets may not be used to having their nails trimmed it is important to get them used to having their feet and toes touched and worked on first. Start slowly by just picking up your pet's feet while playing with them or when petting or grooming them. Start slowly but do it regularly so that your pet doesn't mind the extra attention. If you have never trimmed your pet's nails before then you should contact your veterinarian or a groomer to see if they can demonstrate the proper technique. Most offices will be able to schedule a pedicure for your pet for a small fee and can give you pointers if you are willing to learn to do it yourself."
