A fresh look at 'A Christmas Carol' by Trinity Rep

One never really knows what to expect from "A Christmas Carol" these days because the story has long been a staple of our holiday fare. But Trinity Rep's 2008 retelling of this classic Charles Dickens' tale is a good way to put yourself in the holiday mood.

This is the 32nd year that the Trinity Repertory Company has presented "A Christmas Carol." The show, which opened Tuesday night in Providence, features imaginative costumes, boisterous holiday caroling and a bounty of laughs. A couple of flying spirits add to the haunting story.

The ghosts of Christmas past, present and future give Scrooge the opportunity to mend his ways.

The show, with its message of caring for one's fellow man, appeals to youngsters and adults.

Share the magic of Christmas. Tickets may be purchased by calling (401) 351-4242 or online at www.trinityrep.com.

From the Newport Daily News, December 6, 1983

The Town Council Monday night moved closer to resolving the town's trash problem. Most of the Council supported a two-part ballot for the January special financial town meeting. If the Council approves this next Monday, voters will be asked to decide whether the town should participate in the South Kingstown regional transfer facility either with or without a mini-station in Jamestown.

The Grange Hall on West Street may become the site of an activities center for Jamestown's senior citizens. According to Town Planner George Meservey, some 63 seniors and about a dozen Grange members agreed to pursue the idea, which may be the most economically feasible plan yet proposed for a senior center on the island.

The 14th annual Village Christmas Lighting at East Ferry will cap off a full slate of holiday activities in Jamestown this Saturday.

At a workshop with the Harbor Management Commission on Monday evening, the Town Council members indicated they would be in favor of raising mooring fees in the coming year for the first time in a decade.

The streets of the Jamestown village will be full of bustling shoppers out and about this Saturday, Dec. 5, a day filled with a variety of island holiday activities.
