Zoning Board grant two variances

By Tyler Will

Two residences in Jamestown will soon see a makeover, thanks to approvals from the Board of Zoning Appeal.

The committee approved a zoning variance for Jamestown resident John Lawless Jr. and a restricted variance for Jamestown resident Vaughn Gooding, whose request for an eight-foot fence was reduced to a six-foot fence. The decisions came at the March 24 Zoning Board meeting, which was otherwise uneventful.

Lawless requested to add a second story to his house, which will add what he said is much-needed square footage. "It's really not sufficient to house my family," Lawless told the zoning board. "There's not even a separate area for dining."

The board approved Lawless' request with no restrictions.

Gooding wanted an exterior deck, which would have a 30-foot setback if allowed, and it will have two enclosed areas; one for a hot tub and one for a shower. Gooding said both of the enclosed areas are below the six-foot sight line.

Gooding also requested to have an eight-foot fence installed, which was denied. Zoning Board Chairman Thomas Ginnerty said it would make a "bad precedent." While Gooding said his neighbor had no problem with the fence, the board said there are better ways of preserving privacy.

"I think there's numerous opportunities to plant bushes and shrubs," Ginnerty said.

Zoning Board member Richard Allphin said he cannot ever remember allowing an eight-foot fence.

Junior docents needed at Gilbert Stuart

Do you like learning about colonial history? Do you like telling people what you know?

The Gilbert Stuart Birthplace and Museum is looking for motivated, enthusiastic, and reliable young people between the ages of 9 and 18 to volunteer in the junior docent program. Junior docents assist in greeting, guiding, and giving museum tours to visitors, many from outside of Rhode Island. Boys and girls are asked to volunteer at least once a month and may also serve at special events during the museum's season. Not only is participating in this program fun, but it is an excellent way to earn community service hours and gain a sense of pride.

An open house for prospective junior docents will be held at the museum on Sunday, April 19, at 1 p.m. The junior docent program, including training, will be explained and a tour of the museum led by current junior docents (with whom you may chat about their experience at the museum), will be given. Visit the museum junior docent open house to find out more. For further information call the museum at 294-3001.
