COVE seeks submissions for juried art exhibit

Newport Communities Overcoming Violence and the Women's Resource Center of Newport and Bristol Counties are asking local artists to submit work for the first "Create Change" juried exhibition, a community-wide art show supporting domestic violence prevention.

The exhibit, which opens Feb. 22 and runs through March, is an opportunity for artists to be actively involved in ending domestic violence in Newport.

The organization is soliciting artwork that reflects local artists' interpretation of Newport being proclaimed a "violence-free zone." Artwork will be displayed both at Reel Gallery at 94 Williams St. and in other public spaces.

The exhibition will be juried by a panel of judges from the domestic violence and arts communities. The piece judged to be the most powerful reflection of the proclamation's message will be reproduced and sold locally; proceeds from these sales will support the ongoing domestic violence prevention efforts of Newport COVE.

Funding available from R.I. Foundation

Nonprofit organizations that support the self-sufficiency and independence of women and girls in Newport County may be eligible for funding assistance from the Miss Swinburne Fund at the Rhode Island Foundation.

The fund memorializes Elizabeth H. Swinburne, a civic-minded woman of the early 1900s who established a school in her Newport home to educate young women in the science and skills of household arts. Following her death, the Civic League of Newport continued her mission and, in 2002, established the fund in her name to support scholarships and charitable programs for women and girls in Newport County.

The deadline for submitting applications is Jan. 8, 2010. Programs that provide certificates, degrees and/or formal credentialing for the participants are encouraged.

Visit www.rifoundation.org for more information.

Contemporary Theater to hold play festival

The Contemporary Theater Company will host its fifth annual 24-hour play festival on Saturday, Jan. 9, at South Kingstown High School, 215 Columbia St. in Wakefield.

At the stroke of midnight, writers will have eight hours to create their own original plays. They will then be paired up with a director and actors, who will have another 12 hours to pull together a 10-minute performance.

Doors open for audience members at 8 p.m. on Saturday, Jan. 9. Tickets are $12 and may be purchased at the door or online at www.thecontemporarytheater.com.
